Horrible Accident.—The Pittsburg Gazette says that a terrible accident occurred near Turtle Creek, about one o'clock on Friday last. A number of persons on their way home from a party, were compelled to pass a precipice about two mites from the place where the party was held. The night was very dark, but most of those who were in the company knew the way. The foremost couple soon began to fear that that those behind them had wandered off the path, and called to them to take care. They replied, however, that they knew their road. At that very instant a cry of horror was heard, succeeded by a crash, as of some heavy bodies having fallen from a great distance to the ground, deep groans followed, and all was still. The terror-stricken party, though conjecturing the fearful nature of the accident which had happened to some of them, were unable to afford musculate assistance. A light was procured as soon as possible from the nearest farm house, and after descending to the bottom of theerag, it was found that a Mr. McElroy, and a young lady with whom be had been in company, lay at its foot. Mr. McElroy was perfectly dead, and his body was most horribly crushed. It would have probably been better for the young lady had she too shared his fate, for her back and legs were broken. She had, besides, been otherwise severely injured, so that it was a matter of surprise to all how she escaped instant death. No hopes of her recovery are entertained.

-We hear, says The Sunday News, of some liquor venders in this City, who contemplate processing a small steamboat, and anchoring it just outside the jurisdiction of the city of Portland, or some other large seaport in Maine, for the purpose of supplying the thirsty down-easters with a certain fluid not allowed to be sold within the limits of the Pine-Tree State. Boats are to ply regularly to and from the shore. It remains to be seen how the thing works.
